

5 products you need to replace with organic

Over the course of the last decade, there has been growing awareness among the masses about the environment and our planet. People have noticed eco friendly projects, articles and endeavours popping up in every corner of the internet and media and the common people are starting to take the condition of our planet seriously at a rapid rate.

With all such developments, we are witnessing a rapid rise in the number of organic, handmade and eco friendly businesses and endeavours on the online community. Social media sites are brimming with pages of organic projects and many people have started their own handmade endeavours. This conscious shift from mass produced, environmentally harmful products, to ethically made organic products in the last few years have given rise to what we can now call an online eco friendly movement. You can now find millions of products that are handmade and organic in various corners of the internet. From clothes to pottery, you can find it all. Here 5 products you should replace from harmful materials to organic ones.

- Clothes – The first and foremost is clothes. It is high time we all switched to sustainable fabrics from mass produced ones. Fashion waste is a estimated 20% of global waste and we need to take action now.
- Idols – India is the land of festivals. As beautiful as our festivals are, the idols of God on several festivals are made with plaster-of-Paris which is a toxic material that pollutes our water bodies. It is time we switched back to earthen clay idols. You can get online eco friendly ganpati idols that are safe for the environment.
- Candles – Keeping with the theme of festivals, paraffin wax candles are made from a non renewable resource: crude oil and they also emit toxins into the air. It is important to switch to Soy candles which are eco friendly, organic and non toxic.
